

Stealth Training launches flight to success

Adrian Rosevear has over 17 years experience as a Pilot in the military and has recently launched his own business, Stealth Training. Adrian said Stealth Training equips students with the necessary skills they need to undertake pilot selection processes for both the Military and civilian companies.

"The course will assist any budding pilot in fulfilling their ambition to fly aircraft for a career," Adrian said.

"Initially I noted the latest available statistics revealed of the 2,200 applicants who applied for pilot selection for the Australian Department of Defence over two consecutive years, only 112 applicants were successful in gaining a position in a pilots' course.

Having had over 15 years experience myself as a Military Pilot, eight of those years being as a Pilot Instructor, I thought, what can I do to assist people in achieving the dream that I have lived. After further market research, it became apparent the need for a training course that serviced potential applicants for a majority of pilot selection processes existed. Stealth Training was then borne.

"The course is run over two consecutive full days and covers areas of preparation for selection process from interview techniques, aptitude test techniques and leadership skills to essential knowledge about career paths and aircraft. Initially the courses will be held in Adelaide, Perth, Melbourne, Brisbane and Sydney. I have plans to expand further should the demand continue."

Adrian added, "The name Stealth Training encapsulates the nature of the flying done in the Military. Stealth is all about gaining the edge over opponents and thus the course encourages participants of Stealth Training to gain the competitive edge in their quest to achieve their pilot wings. I have had so much enjoyment flying high performance aircraft such as the AP3C Orion and PC9 that I wish for everyone of the participants in Stealth Training to have the same experiences I have had, plus much more. Flying is such an exciting career that can take you all over the globe and can be very rewarding at the same time."

Adrian Rosevear is a serving Squadron Leader and Qualified Military Flying Instructor with 17 years experience in the Royal Australian Air Force, 15 of those as a pilot gaining in excess of 4600 hours military flying experience. Adrian's specific role within the Air Force is to train pilots.

With more than eight years of pilot training experience, Adrian has the skills and qualifications to deliver a comprehensive course focusing on the competency areas required to prepare you for pilot selection processes and to achieve your pilot wings.

If you would like to arrange an interview or obtain more information on Stealth Training please telephone 0417 741 650 or e-mail info@stealthtraining.com.au

Adrian has a Huon Valley/Kingborough connection! He is the son of Ian and Carmel Rosevear of Kingston, formerly of Franklin; and a grandson of Elsie and Ivan Cordwell of Snug Village.

Adrian went to school at Huonville Primary until Grade 6 then Hutchins School in Hobart, leaving there in Grade 12 in 1989.

Adrian Rosevear teaching formation flying skills in a PC9A aircraft over Perth, Western Australia. (P.3.)

Adrian Rosevear flying a PC9A aircraft over Outback Australia. (P.5.)

Source: Huon Valley News
Date: 25 Oct 06